

Read Pesticide Labels!

Labels have important information about the contents, proper use, and hazards of a product. If you must use a pesticide, read the label and follow the instructions for safe use and disposal. Keep yourself, your family, your pets, and the environment safe.

If you must use a pesticide, make sure to use the correct one for the pest you have.

Look for the signal word. "Danger" and "Poison" are the most dangerous; "Caution" and "Warning" are less so. Use the least hazardous product possible.

Follow instructions. Using more of the product than recommended does not improve results, but may cause more harm to you and the environment.

Keep children and pets out of treated areas. Simple steps such as removing shoes when you enter a home or avoiding treated areas can reduce exposure.

Learn about potential hazards to humans, pets, and wildlife and what to do if you've been exposed.

Companies are not required to list the inert ingredients, but they are often hazardous substances themselves.
